The two candidates canvassed the State together, speaking on the same day at the same place. The debate was conducted—with eminent ability on both sies, and excited universal interest. The result of the election was a vote of 125,7275 for the Republican candidates, who were pledged to the election of Mr. Lincoln, 121,199 for the Bonglas candidates, who were pledged to the election of Mr. Lincoln had thus a majority of over 4,000 on the popular vote over Mr. Douglas was elected Senator by the Legislature, in which his supporters had a majority of eight on joint ballot.

On May 16th, 1860, the Republican National Convention met at Chicago, and on May 18th bgan to ballot for a candidate for President. The whole number of votes was 465, necessary to a choice 233. The character of Mr. Lincoln, whether we consider him as the stay and the staff of the nation, the mighty man, and the man of war, the Judge, and the pradent man, the honorable man, and the counsellor, and the bequent orator, deserves our highest admiration.

Placed as he was, by the providence of God, in a situation more difficult and embarrasing, and at the same time more responsible than has been ever filled by a human being, with perhaps of the root of his country. which enabled him to select the wisest course, and the patient diligence with which he examined a subject in all its bearing. He knew and all the world knew, that, upon his decision at the commencement, and at various point during the progress of the rebellion, was involved the whole future history of the nation, and to no small extent of the whole human family. If he had yielded to the demands of the rebels and of those who sympathized with them in the North and in Europe, our nation would have ceased to be one united people, and would have lost the pre-eminent position among the sations of the earth, which the Almighty had destined for it, and which we trust it will occupy to the latest generation. The flight was interrupted. The scene-shifter, who saw the act and recognized him, tried to head him off, but failed. CAMP 13TH ARMY CORPS, NEAR BLAKELY, ALA, April 11, 1865. Fort Spanish was evacuated on the night of the 8th inst. by the rebels, and occupied on the same night by the 2d brigade, 2d division, 13th atmy corps, at 12:15. Previous to evacuating this stronghold, the enemy sailled out and at-tacked General A. J. Smith's front with great his stronghold, the enemy sallied out and attacked General A. J. Smith's front with great energy, but they were repulsed with great loss in killed and wounded and about five hundred prisoners. General Smith followed the flying enemy and captured from him in return about two hundred vards of his rifle pits and held hern against two or three feeble attempts to retake them. This occurred about 8 P. M., and it some time between that and midnight the enemy hunriedly abandoned his works, leaving some thirty guns and a large amount of amountion in good order, in our hands.

On the morning of the 9th the army was put in motion, moving in the direction of General Steele's position before Blakely. When we sarried at his lines we were met with the welcome news that General Steele had carried the works of the enemy in his front by assault on hat morning, capturing two thousand five hundred prisoners, and a large number of guns. As the line was some two miles in length, I-bave not ascertained the precise number of these. The enemy had planted torpedoes in front of his works, as is his custom, and quite a number of our men were killed or wounded by them.

Our loss in the action of the 8th and 9th at spanish Fort and before Blakely will amount to bout six hundred and fifty in killed and wounded.

The two monitors and the tin-clad which were clean up on the 27th, 28th, and 39th ult. are of a wrecks, the monitor Milwaukee being noken in two, the Osage being split open, and be 48 having her bow blown almost entirely way.
Parties are busily at work taking up torpedoes. One was taken up on the lst inst, containing four hundred and eighty-four pounds of owder.

I am informed the enemy has no more works fany considerable degree of strength this side f the works immediately around the city of of the works immediately around the city of Mobile.

We will move onward just as soon as a pontoon bridge can be placed across the river.

This army is well provided with all necessary supplies, is in fine spirits, has ample confidence in its leaders and its own prowess, and canuot be easily made to believe the enemy can effectually resist it at any point. It expects to be in the possession of Mobile within a few days.

We have seen but little civilization yet in this State, as our line of march has been, so far, along a sandy ridge, covered with a dense growth of pine, or through deep bogs, and almost bottomiess morasses. We smitcipate some more enlivening scenery when we resume our march.

I presume we will move during the day.

to this, that he possessed a lively genius and a vivid imagination, penetration in his judgment of character, and address in availing himself of the advantages of his position, and adapting his measures to the circumstances that called for them. At the same time, his views were comprehensive, his enterprises vast, and his perseverance unconquerable.

His leading measures—particularly his emancipation proclamation and his employing colored soldiers—were distasteful to a large portion of the North, and perticularly of the Middle States, and would not have been carried through successfully under the administration of a man in whose personal integrity the nation did not repose implicit confidence. Mr. Lincoln was a man of unusual tact and practical wisdom. His Cabinet, like that of Washington, contained very discordant elements, and its members were actuated by very different views and purposes; but the President, though a man perhaps hardly equal in intellectual vigor to some of these men, was the master mind, and employed each man to do his separate work, while in his general administration he was con-Washington, April 18, 1865.

event in the history of mankind. In the midst of the American people, where every citizen is taught to other hav and observe the rules of Christian conduct, our Chief Magistrate, the beloved of all hearts, has been assassinated; and when we trace this crime to its cause, when we remember the source whence the assassin drew his inspiration, and then look at the result, we stand yet more astounded at this most barbarous most diabolical assassination. Such a crime as the murder of a great and good man, honored and revered, the beloved and the hope of the people, springs not alone from a solitary individual of ever so desperate wickedness. We can trace its cause through successive steps, without my enumerating them here, back to that source which is the spring of all our wees. No one can say that if the perpetrator of this fiendish deed be arrested, he should not undergo the extremest penalty the law krows for crime; none will say that mercy should interpose. But is he alone guilty? Here, gentlemen, you perhaps expect me opresent some indication of my future policy. One thing I will say. Every era teaches its lesson. The times we live in are not without instruction. The American people must be taught—if they do not already feel—that treason is a crime and must be punished. Applause.] That the government will not always bear with its enemies; that it is strong, not only to protect, but to punish. [Applause.] When we turn to the criminal code and examine the catalogue of crimes, we there find arson laid down as a crime with its appropriste penalty; we find there theft, and robbery, and murder, given as crimes and there, too, we find the last and highest of crimes—treason. [Applause.] With other and nincriro roffences our people are familiar; but and there, too, we find the last and highest of crime:—treeson. [Applause.] With other and interior offences our people are familiar; but in our peaceful history treason has been almost unknown. The people must understand that it is the blackest of crimes, and will be surely punished. [Applause.] I made this alfusion, not to excite the already exasperated feelings of the public, but to point out the principles of public justice which should guide our action at this particular juncture, and which accord with sound public morals. Let it be engraven on every heart that treason is a crime, and traiters shall suffer its penalty. [Applause.] While we are appalled, overwhelmed at the fall of one man in our midst by the hand of a traitor, shall we allow men—I care not by what weapons—

We hear in all quarters the strongest expressions of admiration of the character of Mr. Lincoln. and deep sorrow that his noble career should have been brought to an untimely end. His simplicity of character, his straightforward honesty, his kindliness, even his bluntness of manner, seem to have won the popular heart, even among a foreign, and, in matter of opinion, a hostile nation. We may judge by that fact of his popularity among the citizens of the Northern States. Almost all of us feel as if we had suffered a personal loss. Mr. Lincoln is spoken of in the same terms as are used toward a familiar friend. All mourn his untimely fate. He has risen by industry, ability, and integrity to the great position of Chief Magistrate of his country. He found it in the most imminent danger, and his power to control the elements which were sweeping over the lund were far from generally acknowledged. He was regarded with tear and trambling by the friends of his Government and with contempt by his opponents. But he steadily made his way. Or all the statesmen who have taken part in the American crisis he alone has emerged from it with greatly enhanced reputation, he alone can be said to have been perfectly successful in winning the praise of friends, of former foes, and of keen and disinterested critics. He was not the best man that could have been lumagined for the post of Chief Magistrate in a great civil war. He had not the commanding force which in uses energy into all around him, and his public appearances were often lacking in dignity. But he was segacious, patient, prudent, courageous, honest, and candid. If he did not inspire great Generals, he gave every man in the simp an opportunity of developing the talents within him. Me recognized merit, and rewarded in great military successes. Some say that he hars been cut off at a time when, certainly, he had accomplished a great deal, but leaving much undone which he was well qualified to one who had saved the life of his country. He will be he We hear in all quarters the strongest expre one shall suffer its penalty. [Applause.] While we are appalled, overwhelmed at the fail of one man in our midst by the hand of a traitor, shill we allow men—I care not by what weapons—to attempt the life of the State with impunity? Wille we strain our minds to comprehend the enormity of this assassination, shall we allow the nation to be assassinated? [Applause.]

I speak in no spirit of unkindness. I leave the events of the future to be disposed of as they arise, regarding myself as the humble instrument of the American people. In this, as in all things, justice and judgment shall be determined by them. I do not harbor bitter or revergeful feelings toward any. In general terms, I would say that public morals and public opinion should be established upon the street and inflexible principles of justice. [Applause.] When the question of exercising mercy comes before me, it will be considered calmity, uncitally, remembering that I am the Executive of the nation. I know that men love to have their names spoken of in connection with acts of mercy, and howeasy it is to yield to this impulse. But we must not forget that what may be mercy to the individual is cruelty to the State. [Applause.] In the exercise of mercy, there should be no doubt left that the high prerogative is not used to relieve a few at the expense of the many. Be assured I shall never forget that I am not to consult my own feelings alone, but to give an account to the whole people. [Applause.] In regard to my future course! will now make no professions, no pledges. I have been connected somewhat actively with public affairs, and to the history of my past public acts, which is femiliar to you, I refer for those principles which have governed me heretofore, and will guide me hereafter. In general I will say I have long hower of for the amelioration and elevantion of the great mass of mankind. My opinion as to the nature of popular government have long been cherished, and, constituted as I am, it is now too late in life for me to change them. I believe

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

GENTLAMES: In January last several companies of the 30th Regiment Kentucky volunteers, Col. Craddock commanding, were ordered by Gen. Hobson to this past of the State. The regimental headquarters of Col. Craddock was fixed at this place, and Company A, Capt. Hedge's, retained for post duty.

Col. Craddock came among us nearly an entire stranger, and so with most of the officers and men of the company, bet he discharged the delicate and responsible duties devolving upon him in a manner highly craditable to himself and to the Government, as well as to the entire satisfaction of the citizens of the county.

During their stay here, from early in January till within three or four weeks past, no act of wrong or injustice toward any citizen was com-tioned at our village. I understand the regiment will soon be mustered out of the service, their time having expired. It is, however, to be hoped that the State can retain the gallant Colonel in her service. At this time his aid is indispensable for the State's protection, and he gives it wherever he goes. He neither oppresses the people himself nor allows guerillas to do it. The thanks of the people of this place and county are due, and in their name I tender them to Col. Craddock and his command.

A company commanded by Capt, Gray, of the 54th Kentucky, has been stationed at this post since the departure of Col. Craddock. Of this company I shall speak more hereafter, the limits of this letter having already been extended too far.

Figury, Bassano, and the profile of the beautiful Comtess Waleweld is quite a miniature portrait. The outlines are remarkable for their purity and correctness of drawing, but the flesh tints are cold, and the subject as uninteresting as are all pictures of court ceremonials.

On an easel night to this was "La Priere des Mussulmans"—a perfect gem of exquisite coloring and delicate handling—a gem, by-the-by-purchased aiready at a frightful price by an English amateur. The subject is thus treated: A nuezzin from a minaret calls the faithful to prayer. The time is night; the crescent moon and a single star are hung in an atmosphere of indescribable clearness and purity. This atmosphere is one the palest green hue softening into gray-blue. Against this background of marvellous beauty is a group of Mussulmans on the roofs of their houses in various attitudes of prayer—the white minarets, towers, and roofs of Cairo receding in the distance. Gerome has thrown a poetry into this picture I despair of conveying an idea of. As one gazes at it, a sense of calm repose, of vanishing heat, and the peculiar beauty of an Eastern night steals over one, and wellnigh "steeps our senses in forgettinienes;" and one goes home envying the rich man who has acquired so charming a composition. I have never had the pleasure of meeting M. Gerome, so my praise is disinterested.

climate is against them; for there is nothing in the climate of Canada which the Northern States do not share.

Farmers who have easy access to a market for mutton, ought never to rake merluo sheep, but leave them to those farmers who have not got a market for mutton. In the State of New York they certainly ought to raise mutton sheep in the vicinity of all large towns and populous villages; and, if properly managed, no other branch of agriculture will yield so rich a return. Now, the leading characteristics of all this class of sheep is early maturity, and adopting this as a leading principle by which to be governed, one of the great desiderata of sheep husbandry will be obtained, because by adopting this we obtain better wool, better mutton, and better lambs. Now, as the farmer of the State of New York has a good market for all these three, his object should be to obtain them in the greatest perfection.

Then as to the question of producing good wood. This we cannot have from old sheep.

The first fleece sheared from the sheep is the best, and generally the heaviest. This, in England, is called hog, and in the days of worsted werps was used for the purpose of making them, and we shall want it for making lastings, canlets, and serges. Now that cotton is so scarce, worsted warps will be used for goods in which cotton warps have been used. Mousseline de Laines are now being tande with worsted warps. We say the first fleece is the best. Every succeeding fleece is coarser than its predecessor, and wool raised upon sheep whose condition is always improving is always the best; consequently, when it took four years to fat the wethers, their fleeces were not near so good as when they were fatted at two years to fat the wethers, their fleeces were not near so good as when they were fatted at two years to fat the weak on account of not having satisficient feed to satisfy their gannt forms. But when, by improvement of land and form, the farmer could get wethers into the market at the sponly adapted for worsted, and parti its last possessors.

Two Men Found Drowned,—On Sand y morning an inquest was held at Portland on the body of a man whose name was unknown. He had on a pair of pants, shirt, and vest; was well built, about five feet ten inches high, dark complexion. One side of his head and face termine the cause of his death, but supposed that he had been killed by falling between two flatboats. Another inquest was held at the mail-boat landing on the body of some unknown person, dressed in Federal uniform. There were no marks of violence about his person. The jury rendered a verdict-"Came to his death from drowning."

MINNESOTA. - The St. Paul Press gives the particulars of a brutal murder, which occurred n Sibley county, on Thursday, of last week. A man by the name of Johnston deliberately cut off the head of his son, who was about nine years of age. The man says that the spirits told him to do the deed; and he seemed also to have been impressed with the idea that he could restore him to life again. The murderer has been arrested, and is now awaiting his trial. He is a native of Sweden, has poor command of our language, but in his way seems to talk rationally.

On Monday, at 10 o'clock, Judge Johnton administered? the oath of office to Phillip comppert, Sr., our new chief magistrate of the ity. The ceremonies took place in the Counil Chamber, and were witnessed by a large numer of persons. Judge Johnston made a few appropriate remarks before the oath was ad-

TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1865

Yesterday morning our telegraphic columns contained a Washington despatch evidently written by authority, and enumerating the reasons why the President and his Cabine; repudiate the articles of peace which were transmitted to them over the signatures of Gens. Sherman and Johnston. The reasons given were anticipated in our article on the agreement itself, and from them we can readily nfer the settled policy of the Government toward the rebellious States. Gen. Sherman's action is rejected upon the following accounts:

1. It was an exercise of authority not vested u him, and its face shows that both he and obnston knew he (Sherman) had no authority center into any such an agreement.

2. It was a practical acknowledgment of the rebel government.

3. It undertook to re establish the rebel State governments that had been overthrown at the sacrifice of many thousand loyal lives and an immense treasure, and placed arms and munitions of war in the hands of rebels at their respective capitals, which might be used as soon as the armies of the United States were disbanded and used to conquer and subdue the loyal States.

the rebel States to the debt consummated by the rebels in the name of the State.

6. It put in dispute the existence of the loval State governments, and the new State of West Virginia, which had been recognized by every department of the Government.

7. It practically abolished the confiscation laws, and relieved the rebels of every degree, who had slaughtered our people, from all pains and penalties for their crimes.

8. It gave terms that had been deliberately, repeatedly, and solemnly rejected by President Lincoln, and better terms than the rebels had ever sked in their most prosperous condition.

9. It formed no basis of true and lasting peace, but relieved the rebels from the pressure of our victories, and left them in a condition to renew their efforts to overthrow the United States, and subdue the loyal States whenever their strength was recruited and an opportunity.

The official despatch from Washington in dated April 22d, and signed by E. M. Stauton, to say the least of it, was not worded in a spirit of generosity. It reflects seriously upon the cter of General Sherman. It questions his patriotism, and impugns the honesty of his guage, of opening a way for Jeff Davis and his of Mr. Lincoln's re election. This is a serious charge, and one that, we feel confident, does great injustice to the gallant Sherman, Mr. Stanton should have studied the question better before wording his despatch. Sherman has, by his acts, established his sincere devotion to his country too well to brilliant victories for Federal arms and done more to crush the rebellion than any Generalof equal rank, in the service. In fact, he is regarded by many as a greater soldier than Lieuenant-General Grant. THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.—The expressions of President Johnson in replying to different elegations that have waited upon him are such o inspire great confidence in his ability, and in the comprehensive and patriotic principles which are to govern his administration. He ems to feel the full responsibility of his posiion, the greatness of the occasion, and the mentous consequences which will hang upon he immediate measures of the Government. Appreciating all this, he properly refrains from laiming his future action until he knows what future events may require. Washington, April 24. Washington, April 24.

This morning a delegation of loyal Southerners called on the President by appointment. Every Southern State was represented, and the delegation was introduced by Judge Underwood, of Virginia, who said the visitors were for the most part exiles, but they hoped shortly to return, as the recent interances of the President had encouraged that hope; that they would not advise the hanging of all, but the leaders should be punished.

President Johnson in reply said his feelings fully accorded with those of the delegation, that justice should be meted out to the leaders of this infamous rebellion. On account of the peculiar circumstances under which he had assumed the reins of office, his position was somewhat embarrassing, and he therefore thanked them for the encouragement offered. He could only reiterate what he had said upon former occasions. He thought he knew what mercy and the pardoning power was, for he had heretofore occupied Executive positions, and he had been accused of leaning too much to the side of mercy, but the pardoning power should be used only with stern instite.

accused of leaning too much to the side of mercy, but the pardoning power should be used only with stern justice.

The time had come when the American people should understand the true character of the crime of treason. The idea had been promulgated, and by the leaders of the rebellion themselves, that they would become sufficiently famous. These men were the aristocracy of the South. God protect the people from such an aristocracy as that Referring to the assassination of the President, President Johnson attributed it to the fell spirit pervading the rebellion. President Lincoln was individually but one man, and no one would hesitate to say he who takes the life of one tran should forfeit his life. How much more should those be punished who have raised their hands and attempted by assassination to take away the life of a nation. We may grant an amnesty, and extend leniency to the masses who were forced into the war, but to the intelligent men stern justice should be meted out. In conclusion the President said he hoped the time would speedily come when treason would be driven from the land He should do all in his power to cause the speedy return of peace.

New York, April 24.

Business in the city was generally suspended on the arrivatof the funeral train. Broadway was crammed to the utmost by people arxious to witness the funeral car and the accompanying escort. Windows and housetops were filled with people. The utmost quiet prevailed, and the dense masses remained uncovered as the procession slowly wended its way to the City Hall. The hearse, which was drawn by six horses, on arriving in front of the City Hall, was relieved of the coffin by eight soldiers, who conveyed it to the Governor's room. One thousand singers sang a dirge as it was borne to its resting place. The City Hall in its interior is elaborately draped and festooned with mourning emblems. The room in which the remains of the President are deposited is thoroughly draped in black. The centre of the ceiling is dotted with silver stars relieved by black.

The drapery is finished with heavy silver fringe, The curtains are of black silk velvet, fringed with silver, and gracefully looped. The coffin rests on a dais on an ing iead plane. All heads were uncovered when the corpse was leaving the station again, and the Harmonia and Hoboken quartette clubs, forming a chorus of about 200 voices, sung a funeral dirge. At Jersey City the Joint Committee of the Common Council of New York, with the entire Common Council, His Honor the Mayor, and a delegation of the officials of the State, had met previous to the arrival of the train. The remains were received on behalf of the State of New York, by Hon. Chauncy M. De Pauw, Secretary of State, and then consigned to the care of the committee.

The hearse was placed on the ferryboat, and taken charge of by Major General Dix. As the boat neared the city of New York, the bells were chimed and tolled and minute guns fired. On the arrival of the remains at Del Russe street: the 7th regiment of National Graards, acting as the guard of honor, escorted the cortege through several of the streets to the City Hall, where the united German societies, numering nine hundred voices, and occupying the steps and places in front of the City Hall, chanted dires appropriate to the occasion.

Whereas, By my direction the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th day of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abra ham Lincoln, late President of the United States, and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies; and whereas, our country has become as one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God in order that the bereavement may be sanctified to the nation, now I, therefore, in order to mitigate that grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the views of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the Capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th of May next, to be observed wherever in the United States the flag of our country is respected, as aday of humiliation and mourning, and recommend to my fellow-citi-A PROCLAMATION.

ARRIVAL OF THE CITY OF WASHINGTON

The London Times points out the hardship inflicted on shippers by Seward's order, and says that vessels ariving in America with many passengers unprovided with passports, are not altowed to discharge their cargoes. The Times gives some startting facts on the progress of Russia toward India. English funds continued firm and advancing it on the 10th a slight check was experienced on the tenor of the news from Canada per the ty of London. Money continued unabated as

The World disapproves of Sherman's course, and sharply rebukes Secretary Stanton for assailing him so violently. It says Governmeat, with its intentions and committals, could not have adopted Sherman's plan of settlement, but owed to his services and patriotic intentions to treat him with more consideration and candor. The Daily news thinks Sherman assumed too much authority; though it sees no objection to the terms projosed.

VIRGINIA FIRST AND LAST.—We clip from Fraser's Magazine the following picturesque crime. The letter is as follows: about the skylark is both poetic and truthful ould not understand—of a generation of true themen and gentle women, long ago past buried with lewer representatives left them

The English enacted up their arms. Pocahontas rushed forward and asked Smith to slay rather than suspect her of perfidy, and their apprehensions were quieted. Then thirty woung women ran out from the woods all naked, except a cincture of green leaves. Pocahonts wore on her head a beautiful pair of buck's horns, an otter's skin at her girdle, and another on her arm; a quiver hung on her shoutder, and she held a bow and arrow in her hand. The other nymphs had antless on their heads and various savage decorations. Bu sting from the forest, they circled around John Smith and the fire, singing and dancing for an hour. They then dasappeared it was to invite Smith to their habitations, where they circled around him again, dencing, and crying "Love you not me?" They then feasted him richly; and lastly, with pine-knot torches, escorted him to his lodging. This Captain John Smith was with outdoubt an imperial kind of man, and the firt already tender palpitath as on his saccount. A far different night was that which,
at a later period, found Pocaboutas spending the whole of a dark night climbing hills, toiling through thickets, to reach the tents of Smith and his companions, to warn them of the decree of death which Powhattan, under some misunderstanding, had issued. Smith at this time offered her many beautiful presents; but, as he himself wrote, "with the teners erunning down certain and be seen to have any, for if Powhattan should know it she were but dead; and so she ran away by herself
as she came."

Some two years later Smith returned to England. The Indian princess was induced to marry John Rolie by being told that Smith was dead. After being baptized—as one may see in Chapmans buge picture of that event in the rotunds of the Capitol st Washington—she was taken to England as Mrs. Rolfe. At Breutford, where she was staying, Captain Smith visited her. She uttered no word on seeing him but. land. The Indian princess was induced to marry John Role by being told that Smith was dead. After being baptized—as one may see in Chapman's hage picture of that event in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington—she was taken to England as Mrs. Rolfe. At Breutford, where she was staying, Captain Smith visited her. She uttered no word on seeing him, but, after a modest salutation, turned away and hid her face. She remained thus motionless for nearly two hours. She then came forward to Smith and touchingly reminded him, in the presence of her husband and a large company, of the kindness she had shown him in her own country. "You did promise Powhattan," she said, "what was yours should be his, and he the like to you. You called him father, being in his land a stranger, and for the same reason so I must call you." After a long pause and much emotion she said. "I will call you father, and you shall call me child, and so I will be for ever and ever your countrywoman." Then slowly, and not without some indiguant flashing from her great dark eyes, "They did tell us always you were dead, and I knew no other till Came to Plymouth. Yet Powhattan did command Uttamattomskin to seek you and know the truth because your countrymen will lie much." Our colonial angel died soon afterward, in 1617, leaving one child, Thomas Rolfe, through whom must have come that enormous number of aristocratic Virginian families which claim to be the descendants of Pocahontas—a more honorable descent, by the way, in Virginia, than any traceable from the noblest ancestor that ever "came over with the Conqueror."

EFFCUREAN.—A correspondent sends us the following recipe for making a very excellent soup: Let the proportion of water to the meat be about one quart to the pound. Bones well broken should be saved and added to the meat to increase the street of the to increase the strength of the soup. When the water begins to warm put in the salt. When

LETTER OF JOHN WILKES BOOTH.

PROOF THAT HE MEDITATED HIS CRIME MONTHS AGO. CONFESSES THAT HE WAS ENGAGED IN A TO CAPTURE AND CARRY OFF PRESID. LINCOLN,

HIS PARTICIPATION IN THE EXECUTION OF JOHN BROWN. A SECESSION RHAPSODY.

The following verbatim copy of a letter, in writing which is the hand-writing of John Wilkes Booth, the murderer of President Lincoln, has been farnished us by the Hon. William Millward, United States Marchal of the Eistern District of Pennsylvania. It was handed over to that officer by John S. Clarke, who is a brother-in-law of Mr Booth. The history connected with it is somewhat peculiar. In November, 1884, the paper was deposited with Mr. Clarke by Booth, in a sealed envelope, "for safe keeping." Mr. Clarke being ignorant of the contents. In January last Booth called at Mr. Clarke's house, asked for the package, and it was given up to him. It is now supposed that at that time he took out the paper and added to it his signature, which appears to be in a different ink from that used in the body of the letter, and also from the language employed could not have been put to it originally. Afterwards he returned the package to Mr. Clarke again for safe keeping, sealed and bearing the superscription, "3. Wilkes Booth."

The inclosure was preserved by the family without suspicion of its nature. After the afficing information of the assassination of the President, which came upon the family of Mr. Clarke with crushing force, it was considered proper to open the envelope. There were found in it the following paper, with some seven-thirty United States bonds, and certificates of shares in oil companies. Mr. Clarke promptly handed over the paper to Marshal Milward, in whose custody it now remains. From a pernsal of this paper, it seems to have been prepared by Booth as a vindication of some desperate act which her Beat Br. Wellsby Morgantown and Point, Pleak' Br.
